EDITORIAL

As schools face increasingly difficult times financially, the publication of something like this magazine becomes almost a luxury. More so than ever before, we turn to the generosity of our sponsors for assistance. The magazine committee once again acknowledges the contributions of our regular sponsors, who have stood by the school in the past, and welcomes the many businesses who are helping to finance the magazine for the first time.

We believe that this year's edition reflects two aspects of life at Penrith High that seem almost to have become tradition; that is, the degree of excellence attained in so many fields, academic, sporting and social, and the readiness with which our students turn their talents to new activities. To those of you who are leaving school this year, we trust that this magazine will serve as a fitting souvenir of your years here. To those continuing, we look forward to receiving your contributions for next year's issue.

Good reading.
